BIRD CHECKLIST FOR LEXINGTON CEMETERY

This checklist has been prepared using a format which indicates the seasons and frequency in which the birds are likely to be seen in the Lexington Cemetery. Although this arrangement may seem unnecessarily cumbersome, we feel that it is the most useful to both novice and advanced birdwatchers. For example, to list the Common Loon without qualification (rarity) would be misleading; to omit it would be incorrect.

This list was compiled by four Lexington birders of excellent repute who have been keeping lists of Cemetery birds over a period of at least ten years. These are: Mike Flynn, Andrew Uterhart, Betty Maxson, and Robert Morris.

It is possible that persons unknown to us have records which will include species not listed here. Therefore, this list should be reviewed several years from now. Also, changes in bird populations and the habitat of the Cemetery itself will alter the list over the years.

The Audubon Society of Kentucky thanks you for the opportunity to enlarge the public's knowledge of our Bluegrass Area bird populations.

January 1984

Sally Wasielewski, President Audubon Society of Kentucky

The birds are listed in the order of classification established by the American Ornithologists' Union.
